Abstract: In January 2016, Vietnam’s Cabinet approved the Overall Strategy for International Integration up to 2020, Vision to 2030 (Chiến lược tổng thể hội nhập quốc tế đến năm 2020, tầm nhìn 2030). This document reviewed Vietnam’s bilateral strategic and comprehensive partnerships with twenty-five countries and concluded that more efforts had to be made to implement political commitments and to deepen cooperation, including defence and security cooperation. This paper focuses on Vietnam’s efforts in 2016 to step up international defence cooperation with major strategic partners including the five permanent members of the United Nations Security Council (China, France, Russia, the United Kingdom and the United States) as well as India and Japan. This paper discusses the exchange of high-level visits, strategic dialogues, defence cooperation agreements (equipment procurement, military technology, education and training, military medicine and maritime security), naval port visits and engagement activities, and national defence industry cooperation. This paper concludes that Vietnam seeks to use international defence cooperation to give each strategic partner equity in Vietnam’s stability and development in order to ensure Vietnam’s non-alignment and strategic autonomy.

Keywords: International Integration, deepen cooperation.

1. Introduction

For the past twenty-five years Vietnam has pursued a policy of multilateralizing and diversifying its foreign relations. The genesis of this policy may be traced back to May 1988 when the Vietnam Communist Party (VCP) Political Bureau adopted Resolution No. 13 entitled, "On the Tasks and Foreign Policy in the New Situation". This resolution codified Vietnam’s foreign policy objectives by giving priority to economic development and calling for a “multi-directional foreign policy” orientation with the goal of making “more friends, fewer enemies” (them ban bot thu) [1-5].

Vietnam’s multi-directional foreign policy was officially endorsed in the Secretary General’s Political Report to the VCP’s Seventh National Congress held in June 1991. The Political Report now called for Vietnam to “diversify and multilateralize economic relations with all countries and economic organizations . . . regardless of different socio-political systems” [6, 7]. Later political relations were included in Vietnam’s policy of multilateralization and diversification of relations. For example, by 1995 Vietnam expanded the number of countries it had diplomatic relations with from twenty-three in 1989 to 163, including normalized relations with China, Japan, Europe and the United States [8].

Vietnam’s policy of multilateralizing and diversifying its foreign relations was endorsed by all subsequent national party congresses from the eighth (1996) to the most recent. For example, the Political Report to the Twelfth National Congress held in January 2016 stated, “To ensure successful implementation of foreign policy and international integration… consistently carry out the foreign policy of independence, autonomy, peace, cooperation and development… [and] diversify and multilateralize external relations”.1

One key mechanism in Vietnam’s multilateral foreign policy is the promotion of strategic partnership agreements. Between 2001 and 2016 Vietnam reached strategic partnership agreements with sixteen countries, including all five permanent members of the United Nations Security Council, and agreements on comprehensive partnerships with ten other countries, including Australia and the United States.

The purpose of strategic partnerships is to promote comprehensive cooperation across a number of areas and to give each major power equity in Vietnam’s stability and development in order to ensure Vietnam’s non-alignment and strategic autonomy.

A little studied aspect of Vietnam’s policy of multilateralizing and diversifying its foreign relations through strategic partnerships is Vietnam’s successful promotion of defence and security cooperation with its strategic partners. This paper aims to redress this neglect by analyzing Vietnam’s defense cooperation with the major powers, including Russia, India, Japan, China, the United States, United Kingdom and France during 2016, after the Twelfth Party Congress.2

This paper is divided into two parts. Part 1 provides an assessment of Vietnam’s defence cooperation with the major powers, while Part 2 offers some conclusion.

2. Part 2 providing equity to the major powers

2.1. Policy framework

In January 2016 Vietnam’s Cabinet approved the Overall Strategy for International Integration Through 2020, Vision to 2030 (Chiến lược tổng thể hội nhập quốc tế đến năm 2020, tầm nhìn 2030). This document reviewed Vietnam’s bilateral strategic and comprehensive partnerships with twenty-five countries. It concluded that Vietnam had to make greater efforts to implement political commitments and to deepen cooperation under these agreements, including defence and security cooperation.

2.2. Russia

Vietnam negotiated its first strategic partnership agreement with the Russian Federation in March 2001 during the visit of President Vladimir Putin to Hanoi.3 This agreement set out broad-ranging cooperation in eight major areas including military equipment and technology. In 2008, Vietnam and Russia raised their annual defence dialogue to vice minister level. Between 2008 and 2013 Vietnam and Russia exchanged four visits by their defence ministers. Russian arms sales to Vietnam soon became the largest and most significant component of the strategic partnership, followed by energy (oil, gas, hydropower and nuclear).

In July 2012, Vietnam and Russia raised their strategic partnership to a comprehensive strategic partnership on the occasion of a state visit to Moscow by President Truong Tan Sang. The following year there was a marked increase in defence cooperation. In February, Vietnam and Russia signed a contract for the construction of two additional Gepard frigates for the Vietnamese Navy.

In 2013, Russia and Vietnam exchanged visits by their defence ministers in March and August, respectively. The two sides set up a Joint Working Group on defence cooperation. In March, Russia and Vietnam reached an agreement on cooperation in military technology until 2020, an increase in the number of defence scholarships (beyond 100 allocated annually) and an expansion in the fields of training offered to Vietnamese personnel.

In August 2013, Vietnam and Russia signed a five-year Memorandum of Understanding covering annual defence dialogues, military technology, professional military education and training, assistance in weapons maintenance, joint venture service and the sale of twelve Sukhoi Su-30MKs multirole jet fighters.

Developments After the 12th National Party Congress. In February 2016, Vietnam took delivery of its fifth Varshavyanka or enhanced Kilo-class conventional submarine, HQ 186 Da Nang. In April and May, Russia’s Zelenodolsk Shipyard launched two Gepard 3.9 (Project 11661E) frigates configured for anti-submarine warfare. In June, Russia launched the sixth and final submarine in this order, HQ 187 Ba Ria-Vung Tau; HQ 197 underwent sea trials in September. The sixth submarine and the frigates are expected to be delivered before the end of 2016.

In May, Vietnam’s newly elected Prime Minister, Nguyen Xuan Phuc, made an official visit to Russia to meet with Prime Minister Dimitry Medvedev. Phuc also attended the Commemorative Summit to mark the twentieth anniversary of the Association of Southeast Asian Nations (ASEAN)-Russia Dialogue. According to the Vietnamese media Phuc and Medvedev “affirmed the continuation of co-operation in defence-security, particularly in military techniques”.

In 2016, Russia and Vietnam once again exchanged visits by their defence ministers. General Sergei Shoigu visited Hanoi and Cam Ranh Bay in March, while his Vietnamese counterpart, newly installed Minister of National Defence General Ngo Xuan Lich, made his first official visit to Moscow in April.

4 The other areas of cooperation included: political-diplomatic, oil and gas cooperation, energy cooperation for hydro and nuclear power, trade and investment, science and technology, education and training, and culture and tourism.

Lich and Shoigu discussed fulfilling defence agreements already signed, mutual support in international forums, cooperation in military training and further arms sales. Lich also addressed the 5th Moscow International Security Conference.

During 2016 the following developments in military cooperation were reported:

- Russia informed Vietnam it was willing to sell Klub-A 3M-54AE air-launched anti-ship missiles.
- Vietnam began the production of the KCT 15 anti-surface warfare missile as a result of technology transfer from Russia.
- In August, Russian media sources reported that Russia was rebuilding an airfield at Cam Ranh Bay.
- It was reported that Vietnam had expressed an interest in procuring Russia’s T-90 battle tank.
- Also in October it was reported that Vietnam entered into negotiations with the Siberian Aeronautical Research Institute to modernize its fleet of An-2 military transport aircraft.
- The Joint Committee of the Vietnam-Russia Tropical Center met in Vietnam on November 16.

2.3. Japan

In October 2006, Prime Ministers Shinzo Abe and Nguyen Tan Dung issued a Joint Statement entitled “Toward a Strategic Partnership for Peace and Prosperity in Asia”.

A year later, during an official visit by Vietnam’s president, Japan and Vietnam issued a Joint Statement that included a forty-four point Agenda Toward a Strategic Partnership. The Agenda was divided into seven substantive areas. Point four on security and defence cooperation included exchanges of military delegations, high-level defence officials’ visits, and goodwill ship port calls by the Japan Maritime Self-Defense Force (JMSDF). In January 2007, a Japan Coast Guard patrol vessel held a search and rescue exercise off the coast of central Vietnam involving helicopters. In March 2007, during the course of a visit to Hanoi by the Chief of Staff of the Japanese Ground Self-Defense Force, the two parties discussed future cooperation in information technology training.

In 2011 the two sides adopted a MOU On Bilateral Defence Cooperation and Exchange that outlined a Plan of Action including the reciprocal opening of Defence Attaché Offices and an annual Defence Policy Dialogue. Six high-level dialogues have been conducted, the most recent in Tokyo on December 4, 2015 at deputy foreign minister level.

Since 2011, bilateral defence cooperation has developed considerable breadth and depth. It includes: high-level exchanges and consultations between Defence Ministers, Chiefs of Staff, Service Chiefs, and expert-level exchanges; naval port visits; human resource development; maritime security and safety; United Nations peacekeeping training; military aviation and pilot training, safety; non-traditional security (humanitarian assistance/disaster relief or HA/DR, search and rescue, counter-terrorism, anti-piracy, cyber crime); information technology; military medicine; salvage operations; unexploded ordnance removal; and military technology.

In March 2014, Vietnam and Japan raised their bilateral relations to an Extensive Strategic Partnership in an agreement running to sixty-nine paragraphs. As a follow up, Nguyen Phu Trong, Secretary General of the Vietnam

10 Point four of the Agenda addressed defence cooperation exchanges, cooperation in policy dialogue, comprehensive economic partnership; improvement of the legal system and administrative reforms; science and technology; climate change, environment, natural resources and technology; mutual understanding between the peoples of the two countries; and cooperation in the international arena.

11 June 2014, during the HD981 crisis, a Japanese Landing Ship Dock visited Tien Sa, Da Nang as part of US Navy’s Pacific Partnership.
Communist Party, made his first official visit to Japan at the invitation of Prime Minister Shinzo Abe. At the end of their talks the two leaders issued a thirty-one point Joint Vision Statement. The section on political, security and defence relations stated:

9. The two leaders shared the intention to strengthen cooperation in security and defense by promoting visits and interactions at various levels, enhancing the effectiveness and efficiency of dialogue mechanisms, actively coordinating to implement bilateral security and defense agreements, and strengthening cooperation in the field of human resource training.

10. The two sides share the intention to enhance cooperation in maritime safety and security, such as in search-and-rescue, and in deal with the non-traditional security issues, such as cyber security, cybercrime, terrorism, transnational organized crime, piracy, etc. The sides signed a Memorandum of Cooperation between Coast Guard Agencies.

11. Japan affirmed its continued assistance to help Viet Nam enhance its capacity of maritime law enforcement agencies, address post war unexploded ordnance clearance and participate in UN peacekeeping operations. The defense authorities of both countries signed the Memorandum of Cooperation on UN Peacekeeping operation[s].

In 2015 Japan donated six used patrol boats to the Vietnam Coast Guard and in May a JMSDF P-3C maritime patrol aircraft visited Vietnam.

On November 6, 2015, Japan’s Defence Minister Gen Nakatani met with his counterpart, Minister of National Defence General Phung Quang Thanh in Hanoi. They agreed to boost high-ranking visits and exchanges between the two defence ministries, enhance the efficiency of dialogue and consultation mechanisms, promote cooperation in education and training, and effectively implement the “MOU on defence cooperation in UN peacekeeping operations” ensuring freedom of navigation and aviation.

General Thanh invited the Japan Maritime Self-Defense Force to visit Cam Ranh International Port (CRIP) and to hold their first HA/DR training exercises. Minister Nakatani then made a visit to the international port at Cam Ranh.

In December, Japan dispatched its first Ministry of Defense delegation specifically focused on UN peacekeeping to Hanoi to meet with officials from Vietnam’s Peace Keeping Centre to work out Japanese assistance in training Vietnamese peacekeeping units prior to deployment.

Developments Since the 12th National Party Congress. In January 2016, Vietnam hosted the Third Vietnam-Japan Dialogue of Infantry Staff Officers. At this meeting it was agreed to cooperate in UN peacekeeping operations. The head of the Japanese delegation, Major General Katsuki Takada, also held a working session with the staff of Military Hospital 175 to discuss Japanese medical assistance to Vietnamese personnel preparing to deploy a level-2 field hospital to the UN Mission in the Republic of South Sudan.

From February 16-18, a JMSDF team and two P-3C maritime patrol aircraft flew to Da Nang to take part in a series of exercises with the VPA Navy. On the final day the two sides conducted a search and rescue map exercise at an onshore facility based on simulated cooperation between the P-3C planes and Vietnamese naval vessels assisting a ship in distress.

In February, a delegation from Japan’s Ministry of Defense visited the Center for Information and Technology and Foreign Languages at Vietnam’s Signal Officers’ Training School. The two sides discussed cooperation in information and technology education, training courses in Japan and possible Japanese investment in the Military Software Park in Nha Trang. Also that month, the JMSDF conducted joint drills with the Vietnam People’s Navy both ashore and at sea. In April, two JMSDF training ships, JS Ariake and JS Setogiri, paid a four-day port visit to CRIP that included a search and rescue training exercise and practice in executing the Code of Unplanned Encounters at Sea.

In May, fifty-one trainees from the Vocational Training and Manpower Export Company, under the Defence Economic Technical Industry Corporation of the General Department of Defense Industry completed the first five-month construction training course with Japan’s Mukai Corporation.

In May, Japan’s Foreign Minister Fumio Kushida met his counterpart Pham Binh Minh in Hanoi. Vietnam requested Japan to provide new vessels to strengthen its Coast Guard. In July, the president of the Japan’s House of Representatives Committee on Security, Eto Akinori, met his counterpart, Nguyen Kim Kho, chairman of the National Assembly’s Committee for Defence and Security, to discuss the legal aspects of Japanese assistance to build up the capacity of the Vietnam Coast Guard. In September, Prime Ministers Shinzo Abe and Nguyen Xuan Phuc met on the sidelines of the ASEAN summit in Vientiane. Abe told Phuc that Japan was ready to provide two new large patrol boats for the Vietnam Coast Guard to strengthen its maritime law enforce capabilities. The new patrol boats would be financed by a low-interest loan under Japan’s Overseas Development Assistance program.

On June 3, Vo Van Tuan, Deputy Chief of the VPA General Staff met with Japanese defence officials on the sidelines of the 15th Shangri-La Dialogue in Singapore. In June, Japanese media reported that Vietnam’s navy informally inquired about the possibility of procuring secondhand MSDF P-3C anti-submarine patrol aircraft. From July 15-18, the JMSDF Shimokita (LST-4002) took part in the U.S. Pacific Partnership 2016 program at Tien Sa port, Da Nang along with the VPA Navy hospital ship Khang Hoa (HQ 01) and the USNS Mercy (T-4H 19).

In November, President Tran Dai Quang met with Prime Minister Shinzo Abe on the sidelines of the APEC summit in Lima Peru. Both leaders reaffirmed their commitment to the peaceful resolution of maritime disputes in the South China Sea.

On November 22, Japan’s Ambassador to Vietnam, Umeda Kunio, met with Deputy Minister of National Defence, Sr. Lt. General Nguyen Chi Vinh at the Ministry of National Defence. General Vinh sought cooperation from Japan in “officer exchange, treatment of dioxin-affected areas, cooperation in mine action, and education and training. Ambassador Kunio committed Japan to assist in “UN peacekeeping operations, maritime law enforcement, [and] increasing young officers exchange…”

2.4. India

In July 2007, India and Vietnam adopted a thirty-three point Joint Declaration on Strategic Partnership that mapped out cooperation in five major areas including defense and security cooperation. Six areas of defence cooperation

22 The other areas of included: closer economic cooperation and commercial engagement; science and technology cooperation, cultural and technical cooperation and multilateral and regional cooperation. See: Carl were identified: strategic dialogue at vice ministerial level; defense supplies, joint projects, training cooperation and intelligence exchanges; exchange visits between defense and security establishments; capacity building, technical assistance and information sharing with particular attention to security of sea lanes, anti-piracy, prevention of pollution and search and rescue; counter terrorism and cyber security; and non-traditional security.23

The election of Narendra Modi as Prime Minister of India injected new momentum in their bilateral strategic partnership. In 2014, for example, President Pranab Mukherjee visited Hanoi in September. At the conclusion of his state visit he issued a joint statement with his counterpart President Tran Dai Quang that declared, “cooperation in national defense was an important pillar in their strategic partnership”. To underscore this point Mukherjee announced that India was making available to Vietnam a $100 million line of credit to facilitate defense procurement over the next fifteen years. Mukherjee also agreed to expand military training and assist the Vietnam People’s Navy to develop strike capabilities.

Vietnam’s Prime Minister Nguyen Tan Dung made an official visit to India in October 2014 and was welcomed by Prime Minister Modi who noted, “it is no surprise that Vietnam has been at the forefront of our efforts [to Act East]… We have a shared interest in maritime security, including freedom of navigation and commerce and peaceful settlement of disputes in accordance with international law.” To underscore this point, Modi declared:

Our defense cooperation with Vietnam is among our most important ones. India remains committed to the modernization of Vietnam’s defense and security forces. This will include expansion of our training program, which is already very substantial, joint exercises and cooperation in defense equipment. We will quickly operationalize the 100 million dollars Line of Credit that will enable Vietnam to acquire new naval vessels from India. We have also agreed to enhance our security cooperation, including counter-terrorism.

In May 2015, Vietnam and India signed a Joint Vision Statement on Defence Relations. Defense cooperation is quite comprehensive and includes: high-level exchange visits, an annual security dialogue, service-to-service interaction, professional military education and training (reciprocal languages, intelligence, UN peacekeeping, jungle and mountain warfare, submariner, basic course, Su-30 pilot conversion24), naval port visits25, ship construction and provision of spare parts, training and capacity building, assistance in maintaining military equipment (repair, maintenance and fuel), defence co-production, multilateral exercises (humanitarian assistance/disaster relief and search and rescue), and cooperation at regional forums such as the ASEAN Defense Ministers’ Meeting Plus.

23 Since 2007, defense cooperation has included high-level visits, an annual Defense Strategy Dialogue, naval port visits and two lines of credit totaling US$600 million for defense acquisitions including Offshore Patrol Vessels.

In March, Vietnam and India as co-chairs of the ASEAN Defence Ministers’ Meeting (ADMM)-Plus Experts’ Working Group on Humanitarian Mine Action hosted the Peacekeeping Operations and Humanitarian Mine Action Field Training Exercise in India. That same month, the Indian Ambassador to Vietnam and other embassy staff paid a working visit to the Signal Officers Training School in Nha Trang where Indian officers have been posted to the Information Technology and Foreign Languages Centre, under a defence cooperation agreement.

In May 2016, a delegation from the Indian National Defence University visited their counterpart institution, the National Defence Academy, in Hanoi. In late May and early June, two Indian warships, INS Satpura and INS Kirch made a four-day visit to CRIP.

In June, India’s Defence Minister Manohar Parrikar made a two-day trip to Vietnam that included discussions with his counterpart General Ngo Xuan Lich and a working visit to the Information Technology and Foreign Languages Centre at the Signal Officers Training School in Nha Trang. The Centre was set up in June 2015 with Indian assistance. At their meeting Parrikar and Lich agreed to commence with phase two of the Centre, the construction of a software park for the Vietnamese military. On the sidelines of Parrikar’s visit, representatives of Indian and Vietnamese defence industries met to map out future areas of investment and cooperation. The Indian media carried reports at this time that India was advancing plans to sell the BrahMos cruise missile to Vietnam.

In early September, during the course of an official visit by Prime Minister Modi to Hanoi, Vietnam and India raised their bilateral relations to a comprehensive strategic partnership. The first section on political relations defence and security stated:

The two Prime Ministers expressed satisfaction at the significant progress made in defence cooperation including exchange of high level visits, annual high-level dialogue, service-to-service cooperation, naval ship visits, extensive training and capability building, defence equipment procurement and related transfer of technology, and cooperation at regional for a such as ADMM-Plus.

Modi offered Vietnam a $500 million Line of Credit for unspecified defence purchases and $5 million to set up a military information technology software park in Nha Trang. During Modi’s visit Vietnam’s Border Guard and India’s Larson & Toubro Ltd. signed a contract for the construction and delivery for four Ocean Patrol Vessels under a $100 million Line of Credit offered in 2014.

In September, twenty Vietnamese officers and forty submariners completed the six-month basic submarine course at INS Satavahana in India.

In summary, India has fast emerged as one of Vietnam’s major defence industry partners. India is currently upgrading Vietnam’s Petya-class light frigates for anti-submarine warfare.

26 The Centre is responsible for IT research, IT application, IT transfer, foreign language training for both civilians and military personnel, and the provision of IT services to domestic and foreign markets.

India is also expanding its existing service program to upgrade all existing Vietnamese stocks of Soviet-era military equipment, including thermal sights and fire control systems for armoured vehicles, T-54 and T-55 tanks, and M-17/M-8 helicopters. Also, India has offered to sell Light Combat Helicopters and heavy weight torpedoes to Vietnam and the two sides are continuing to discuss the sale of the BrahMos cruise missile.

2.5. China

In 2008, seventeen years after the normalization of relations, the leaders of Vietnam and China raised their bilateral relations to a strategic partnership. A year later this was upgraded to a strategic cooperative partnership and established a Joint Land Border Committee29. In 2013 Vietnam and China raised their bilateral relations to a comprehensive strategic cooperative partnership, the highest designation among all of Vietnam’s strategic partners. That year China and Vietnam agreed to establish a border mechanism at three levels involving their border guards and public security officials.

As strategic partners China and Vietnam have developed a dense network of party, state, defense and multilateral mechanisms to manage their relations. A Joint Steering Committee at deputy prime minister level oversaw their bilateral relations. In March 2014 and Vietnam and China inaugurated a Border Defence Friendship Exchange program at deputy minister level. The second Border Defence Exchange took place in May 2015 when it was raised to defence minister level.

Strategic trust between Vietnam and China was seriously undermined in May 2014 when China deployed a mega oil-drilling platform, the HD 981, in Vietnam’s Exclusive Economic Zone. In July 2014 China withdrew the HD 981 and tensions abated.

China received a special envoy of the Secretary General of the Vietnam Communist Party. This was followed in October by a visit by a high-level delegation of thirteen senior Vietnamese general led by Minister of National Defence General Phung Quang Thanh. A hot line was set up between the two defence ministries. Over the course of 2014-15 forty-nine joint land border patrols were conducted. In August 2015, the fifth China-Vietnam Strategic Defence Dialogue at vice ministerial level met.

Developments after the Twelfth National Party Congress. In March 2006, Vietnam and China co-hosted the third Border Defence Friendship Exchange. China’s Defence Minister Senior Lt. Gen. Chang Wanquan visited Hanoi from March 26-28 for a meeting with his counterpart, Minister of National Defence General Phung Quang Thanh. The two ministers signed a MOU on cooperation in UN peacekeeping operations. Thanh stated that the two militaries “will see more military exchanges in the areas of personnel training, border cooperation, academic research, UN peacekeeping, and national defense industry…”30.

Minister Chang also met with Senior Lt. General Ngo Xuan Lich, the chief of the VPA’s General Political Department and VCP Secretary General Nguyen Phu Trong. Trong “suggested that the two sides continue to maintain high-level contact and effectively carry out defence cooperation mechanisms such as defence policy dialogue, joint patrol on the Tonkin Gulf and along the land border, and defence exchange…”31. Minister Chang responded by suggesting that the two armed forces should “increase high level exchanges and strategic communication, increase friendly feelings, deepen border defense exchanges and practical cooperation on U.N. peacekeeping, military academic research and the defense industry.”

On March 30, General Thanh led a high-ranking defence delegation to Pingxiang, Guangxi province to take part in the third Border Defence Friendship Exchange program where he was greeted on arrival by his counterpart Sr. Lt. General Chang. The two ministers observed a joint border patrol and watched a martial arts performance and an exhibition of anti-terror combat techniques by local military forces.

From April 20-23, Vietnam and China coast guards conducted their eleventh annual joint fishery patrol in the Gulf of Tonkin. According to press accounts this joint patrol was “the longest in terms of time and distance since the first joint patrol of the kind was launched in 2006.”

On June 3, on the sidelines of the 15th Shangri-La Dialogue in Singapore, Admiral Sun Jiaqo, China’s Deputy Chief of Staff of the Joint Staff Department of the Central Military Commission, met with Deputy Defence Minister Sr. Lt. General Nguyen Chi Vinh for bilateral talks. General Vinh suggested that the two countries organize strategic defence dialogues at the deputy ministerial level, and intensify coordination between their border, Vinh also extended an invitation for the China Coast Guard to join the Vietnam Coast Guard in conducting humanitarian rescue exercises in Vietnamese waters.

Admiral Sun said he hoped “the two countries can step up high-level exchanges, enhance strategic trust, boost cooperation in various sectors, including under the framework of the United Nations peacekeeping missions.” Sun called for both sides to boost “exchange activities between the two countries’ border areas”.

In late July, the Border Guard Command of Ha Giang province and the Border Police in Yunnan province conducted a joint counter-terrorism exercise at the Thanh Thuy International Border Gate.

In August, Vietnam’s new Defence Minister, General Ngo Xuan Lich led a high-level defence delegation on his first official visit to China at the invitation of his counterpart, Sr. Lt. General Chang. The two ministers discussed the fourth Border Defence Friendship Exchange to be held in April 2017, and called for the expansion of the border guard cooperation model, the continuation of high-level exchanges and defence strategic dialogues at deputy ministerial level, annual defence exchanges including naval port visits and exchanges by junior officers. The two ministers signed a MOU on cooperation between the Institute for Military Strategy and China’s Academy of Military Science. Lich paid courtesy calls on Li Yuanchao, Vice President, and Fan Changlong, Vice Chairman of the Central Military Commission.

From September 10-15, Prime Minister Nguyen Xuan Phuc made an official visit to Beijing and then attended the 13th China-ASEAN Expo in Nanning. During Phuc’s visit, Deputy Defence Minister Nguyen Chi Vinh met with Deputy Chief of the General Staff Department Qi Jianguo agreed “to continue enhancing border exchange programs and working out new and effective cooperation mechanisms so to beef up defense cooperation on a par with the comprehensive strategic partnership…”42.

On September 19, a delegation from the Political Work Department of China’s Central Military Commission led by Major General Yin Hongwen held a working session with Office of the General Political Department (GPD) of the Vietnam People’s Army (VPA) in Hanoi. The two sides discussed “their working experiences, functions and tasks with the aim of providing efficient assistance to leadership in directing Party and political work in the army.”43 The visit was under the auspices of an Agreement on Party and Political Work Cooperation between the General Political Departments of the VPA and People’s Liberation Army (PLA). Sr. Lt. General Luong Cuong, the Director of the VPA’s GPD, received Maj. General Yin. General Yin noted that “visits of defense delegations at all levels, including defense leaders, commanders of military zones, services, corps and academies increased in recent years”44.

From September 19-24, a delegation of junior VPA officers, led by Lt. Col. Nguyen Duc Cuong, Deputy Chief of the GPD’s Army Youth Committee, visited China as part of the young officer exchange program for 2016. The Vietnamese delegation visited the Beifang Corporation (Norinco), that produces weapons and equipment for the PLA, Guard Division 3 and the PLA Special Operations Academy45.

In October (22nd-26th), three PLAN warships (Xiang Tan, Zhou Shan and Chao Hu) from the 23rd Naval Escort Task Force made a five-day goodwill visit to Cam Ranh International Port after completing their deployment to the Gulf of Aden. This was the first visit by Chinese naval ships to CRIP and was a result of Defence Minister Lich’s visit to China in August46.

On October 31, a delegation from China’s Department of Border Guard Management, Ministry of Public Security was received in Ha Long by Quang Ninh province Border Guard Command. A cultural exchange program was held between the Quang Ninh province Border Guard and China’s Guangxi Zhuang Autonomous Region Border Police Force47.

On November 1, as part of the program of annual defence exchanges, a delegation of PLA junior officers met with their Vietnamese counterparts in Hanoi. The head of the PLA delegation, Colonel Ding Luochao, and his host, Colonel Dinh Quog Hung, briefed each other on youth activities in their respective armed forces. The PLA junior officers visited Regiment 143, Division 315 to share experiences on “the organization of youth and youth union activities in the army… and natural disaster prevention and relief…”48.

In early November, a delegation of Chinese peacekeeping experts, led by Senior Colonel Nanning, Deputy Chief of the Ministry of Defence’s Peacekeeping Office, visited Vietnam as part of the MOU on Peacekeeping signed in April 2015. The visiting delegation was received by Senior Lt. General Vo Van Tuan, Deputy Chief of the VPA General Staff.

On November 4, China hosted the 6th Vietnam-China Defense Strategic Dialogue in Chengdu, Sichuan province. Admiral Sun Jiangguo, Deputy Chief of Joint Staff Department, Central Military Commission, and Senior Lt. General Nguyen Chi Vinh, Deputy Minister of National Defense co-hosted the dialogue. A review of activities conducted since last year’s strategic dialogue noted progress “in delegation exchanges, education-training and naval collaboration. The sides operated their hotline and exchanged experience in participating in UN peacekeeping missions. Their annual border defence friendship exchanges have been considered a highlight in joint activities.”

Admiral Sun and General Vinh “agreed to maintain the pace of and expand collaboration in a number of fields, including press exchanges, defence industry as well as teaching Chinese and Vietnamese. They also agreed to draw up a draft joint vision statement on defence cooperation and a protocol systematizing border defence friendship exchanges. Finally, Sun and Vinh encouraged China’s Academy of Military Sciences and Vietnam’s Institute of Military Strategy to carry out promptly a joint project “on collection of documents and memorabilia about the friendship between the two countries’ armies and the Ho Chi Minh=Mao Xedong ideology on solidarity during the resistance wars against France and the US.” Vinh made a courtesy call on Defence Minister Sr. Lt. General Chang Wanquan before returning to Hanoi.

Also on November 4, the border guard forces of Vietnam’s Quang Ninh province and China’s Dongxing city, Guangzi Zhuang Autonomous Region, carried out the first joint counter-terrorism exercise at Mong Cai international border gate. At the conclusions of this exercise both sides signed a MOU on future counter-terrorism exercises.

On November 9, coast guard forces from China’s Nanhai Division and Vietnam’s Coast Guard Region 1 Command concluded a three-day joint fishery drill in the Gulf of Tonkin. This was the second such drill held in 2016. During the exercise the two sides checked the licenses of fishing trawlers and their equipment, explained laws and regulations related to the joint fishing area, conducted a joint search and rescue drill, and exchanged onboard ship visits.

On November 10, a Chinese maritime law enforcement ship, made a friendly four-day port visit to Chua Ve port, Hai Phong. The Chinese visitors held talks with the Vietnam Coast Guard Region 1 Command, and participated in friendly spots with their counterparts.

develop after the normalization of relations in July 1995. In 2003 both countries agreed to start triennial exchange visits by Defence Ministers on alternate basis. In 2009, the United States made its first naval port visit to Vietnam.

Bilateral defence relations were significantly upgraded in August 2010 with the inauguration of the first annual Defense Policy Dialogue at deputy defence minister level. On September 20th the following year the Deputy Assistant Secretary of Defense for South and Southeast Asia and Vietnam's Deputy Minister for National Defence signed a Memorandum of Understanding on Advancing Bilateral Defense Cooperation at the 2nd Defense Policy Dialogue. The MOU set out five priority areas for cooperation: maritime security, search and rescue, humanitarian assistance and disaster relief, exchanges between defense universities and research institutes, and UN peacekeeping operations.

Between 2010 and 2013 officials from Vietnam and the United State mulled the idea of reaching an agreement on strategic partnership. In the end both sides stepped back from this commitment and decided instead to adopt a Joint Statement on Comprehensive Partnership during the state visit by President Truong Tan Sang to Washington in July 2013. Nine major areas of cooperation were listed political and diplomatic relations, trade and economic ties, science and technology, education and training, environment and health, war legacy issues, defence and security, protection and promotion of human rights, and culture, sports, and tourism.

Section six of the Joint Statement on Comprehensive Partnership on defence and security stated:

The two leaders agreed that the United States and Vietnam would continue to cooperate on defense and security. They expressed satisfaction with the Memorandum of Understanding on Advancing Bilateral Defense Cooperation of 2011 and reaffirmed their commitment to its full implementation. The Presidents agreed to continue the U.S.-Vietnam Defense Policy Dialogue and the bilateral Political, Security, and Defense dialogue as opportunities to review the defense and security relationship and discuss future cooperation.

The two Presidents agreed to expand mutually beneficial cooperation to enhance capabilities such as search and rescue and disaster response. The Presidents also underscored the importance of enhanced cooperation in non-traditional security matters and agreed to work more closely to counter terrorism; enhance maritime law enforcement cooperation; combat transnational crime including piracy, and narcotics, human, and wildlife trafficking; and address high-tech crime and cyber security. President Obama welcomed Vietnam’s decision to participate in United Nations peacekeeping operations and emphasized the United States’ desire to assist with training and other support for this effort through the Global Peace Operations Initiative (GPOI).

In December 2013, Secretary of State John Kerry announced that Vietnam would receive $18 million in new assistance to enhance the capacity of its Coast Guard units to deploy rapidly for search and rescue, disaster response, and other activities. Kerry’s announcement addressed the priorities identified by the heads of the U.S. and Vietnam Coast Guards in their joint minutes on maritime cooperation signed in October 2013.

In October 2014, the U.S. State Department announced the lifting on the sale of lethal weapons to Vietnam on a case-by-case basis. This partial lifting of arms sales was restricted to defence articles related to maritime security and was aimed at improving Vietnam’s maritime domain awareness and maritime security capabilities.

On June 1, 2015, bilateral defence cooperation witnessed another major advance when the defence ministers of Vietnam and the United States, Phung Quang Thanh and Ashton Carter respectively, adopted the Joint Vision Statement on Defense Relations. This statement outlined twelve areas and forms of cooperation:

1. Conduct increased cooperative activities to enhance trust and mutual understanding;
2. Collaborate in multilateral fora and organizations - including ASEAN - when it is in their common interest;
3. Strengthen the capabilities of our defense institutions and militaries to enhance cooperation, promote security, and address non-traditional security threats;
4. Expand defense trade between our countries, potentially including cooperation in the production of new technologies and equipment, where possible under current law and restrictions;
5. Expand collaboration on maritime security and maritime domain awareness, including where possible, port visits and voyage repair visits to ports and facilities of each country, as mutually identified;
6. Expand training and educational opportunities of each country’s military academic institutions;
7. Strengthen the ability of each country to conduct search and rescue activities and respond quickly to disasters and provide humanitarian response;
8. Assist in building capacity to conduct successful United Nations peacekeeping operations;
9. Increase exchanges of information and best practices on topics of mutual interest, including science and defense technology exchanges;
10. Enhance cooperation to overcome the legacies from the war;
11. Continue strategic-level discussions by senior leadership from each side’s defense ministry on international security issues of mutual interest; and
12. Welcome regular exchanges of defense leadership to each country.

A month later U.S.-Vietnam political relations were raised to a new level with the adoption of a Joint Vision Statement on July 7 by President Obama and VCP Secretary General Nguyen Phu Trong. The two leaders affirmed.

Both countries underscore their commitment to collaborating on, among other issues, addressing non-traditional security threats, cooperation in maritime security, maritime domain awareness, defense trade and information sharing, search and rescue, humanitarian assistance and disaster relief, and defense technology exchange. Both countries welcome joint efforts to address war legacy issues, including the humanitarian mission of missing in action (MIA) recovery, the clearance of unexploded ordinance and dioxin remediation, and further assistance for these humanitarian efforts.

In fiscal year 2015-16, under the Maritime Security Initiative, the United States allocated $40.1 million to Vietnam for the purchase of maritime defence equipment, specifically to assist in training, maritime intelligence, surveillance and reconnaissance, command and control in its maritime enforcement agencies, and bilateral humanitarian assistance/disaster relief exercises to promote interoperability.

Developments Since the 12th National Party Congress. In late January 2016 more than seventy VPA officers graduated from four English language courses sponsored by the U.S. Department of Defense. The course was conducted at the Ministry of National Defence’s Foreign Language Training Centre 971 in Hanoi.

In February, a delegation of course members of the U.S. Army’s Advanced Strategic Leadership Studies Program made a study tour of Vietnam. The delegation was received by Senior Lt. General Vo Van Tuan, VPA Deputy Chief of the General Staff.

In March, Michael Michalak, Senior Vice President of the US-AASEAN Business Council visited Hanoi and met with Sr. Lt. General Nguyen Chi Vinh, Deputy Minister of National Defence. Michalak informed General Vinh that a U.S. business delegation would visit Vietnam “to explore possibilities for cooperation with Vietnamese defence industries.” General Vinh noted that “cooperation in defence industry has not matched the two countries’ potential” and “Vietnam wants the US to provide modern technologies in accordance with Vietnam’s reality to produce amphibious [sic] products, considering it a firm step to boost bilateral defence cooperation.”

From March 17-19, the Commander of the U.S. Pacific Fleet, Admiral Scott Swift, and the Commander of the U.S. Marine Corps Forces Pacific, Lt. Gen. John Toolan, made a three-day joint visit to Vietnam. They held discussions with Rear Admiral Pham Hoai Nam, Commander of the VPA Navy. Admiral Swift held discussions with General Do Ba Ty, Chief of the VPA General Staff. General Ty noted that the U.S. Navy provided training in defusing sea mines and bomb disposal. Admiral Swift noted that there is much room for cooperation between the two navies and that he would make an effort to ensure bilateral naval cooperation was more effective.

On April 14, the U.S. Consulate General in Ho Chi Minh City and Military Hospital 175 co-hosted a workshop on development trends in international hospitals. The workshop was attended by forty delegates from the United States representing leading hospitals, pharmaceutical and medical equipment companies, medical institutes and training establishments. The workshop identified the following areas for future cooperation: scientific research, training, medical practice and equipment delivery.

Also in April, VPA Navy officers visited U.S. Patrol Squadron 47 in Hawaii and inspected a P-3C Orion to understand its capability.

In May 2016, President Obama made an official visit to Vietnam and the invitation of President Tran Dai Quang. In Hanoi Obama announced the lifting of all restrictions on arms sales to Vietnam.

The two leaders adopted a Joint Statement on May 23 that set out six areas for future defence cooperation: humanitarian cooperation (recovers of the remains of soldiers missing in action), war legacy (unexploded ordnance, dioxin remediation, maritime security, UN peacekeeping, humanitarian assistance and disaster relief, and securing and defence cooperation. The two presidents reaffirmed their commitment to strengthen defense cooperation between the two countries as outlined in the Memorandum of Understanding on Advancing Bilateral Defense Cooperation in 2011 and the U.S.-Vietnam Joint Vision Statement on Defense Relations signed in 2015, giving priority to humanitarian cooperation, war legacy, maritime security, peacekeeping, and humanitarian assistance and disaster relief. Both sides reiterated they would continue to strengthen cooperation in the fields of security, combatting transnational crime, and cyber security. Vietnam welcomed the U.S. government decision to fully lift the ban on the sale of lethal weapons to Vietnam. Vietnam welcomed U.S. maritime security assistance - including through the Maritime Security Initiative (MSI), the Cooperative Threat Reduction program, and Foreign Military Financing - and looked forward to working with the United States to enhance Vietnam’s maritime capabilities. The United States and Vietnam signed a letter of intent to establish a working group for the Cooperative Humanitarian and Medical Storage Initiative (CHAMSI), which will advance cooperation on humanitarian assistance and disaster relief. The United States reaffirmed its support for Vietnam’s participation in UN peacekeeping, detoxifying dioxin at Bien Hoa airport, and providing Vietnam with a map of unexploded ordnance left over from the Vietnam War. Shear reaffirmed U.S. support in dealing with war legacy issues and assisting Vietnam in training for UN peacekeeping.

From July 15-18, the USNS Mercy (T-AH 19) took part in the U.S. Pacific Partnership 2016 program at Tien Sa port, Da Nang along with the VPA Navy hospital ship Khanh Hoa (HQ 01) and the the JMSDF Shimokita (LST-4002)

On October 17, Cara Abercrombie, U.S. Deputy Assistant Secretary of Defense for South and Southeast Asia, visited Hanoi and met with Deputy Minister of National Defence, Sr. LT. General Nguyen Chi Vinh. General Vinh his guest “that Vietnam will support the U.S. and other partners to intervene in the region as long as it brings peace, stability and prosperity”.

On October 18, the U.S. and Vietnam commenced the second phase of dioxin removal in Da Nang. The first phase was completed in May and the second phase is expected to conclude in mid-2017.

On October 26, Admiral Harry B. Harris, Commander of the U.S. Pacific Command, visited Hanoi for a working session with his counterpart. He met with Lt. General Phan Van Giang, Deputy Minister of National Defense and VPA Chief of the General Staff72.

On October 27, Admiral Harris visited Military Hospital 175 in Ho Chi Minh City that is involved in preparing for the deployment of a level-2 hospital for peacekeeping with the United Nations Mission in South Sudan. Harris noted that Vietnam was one of a few countries that the U.S. cooperates with in military medicine73. The next day Admiral Harris and Major General Bui Trung Dung, Deputy Commander of the Vietnam Coast Guard, presided over the inauguration of a maintenance boat haul-out facility in Quang Nam developed with U.S. support74. Admiral Harris was accompanied by the U.S. Consul General and the Director of Operations, Readiness and Exercises, U.S. Defense Threat Reduction Agency.

U.S.-Vietnam comprehensive partnership featured during the visit to Washington, D.C. from October 24-30 by Dinh The Huynh, the standing member of the VCP Central Committee’s Secretariat. Huynh was invited by Secretary of State John Kerry75. Huynh, inter alia, called for the strengthening of cooperation in “defence-security links… while prioritising the settlement of war consequences and humanitarian aid”76. Huynh reiterated Vietnam’s willingness “to work with the US and relevant countries to boost ASEAN’s central role and build ASEAN-led mechanisms to form regional architecture in the 21st century”77. Significantly Huynh welcomed “the active role of countries inside and outside the region, including the US, in keeping peace and stability in the East Sea” and urged the U.S. to continue its collaboration with countries in the Asia-Pacific region78.

On November 18, David Shear, U.S. Principal Deputy Undersecretary of Defense for Policy, visited Hanoi and met with Deputy Minister of National Defence, Sr. Lt. General Nguyen Chi Vinh. Both Shear and Vinh agreed to expand cooperation in the fields of mutual interest such as addressing the aftermath of the war, delegation exchanges, education and training, UN peacekeeping operations, and search and rescue79.

United Kingdom. In 2010, Deputy Prime Minister and Foreign Minister Pham Gia Khiem visited London and met with Foreign Secretary William Hague. At the end of their discussions the two officials issued a Joint Declaration establishing the Vietnam-United Kingdom (UK) Strategic Partnership. The Joint Declaration identified seven priority areas including security and defence80. According to defence industry sources, the strategic partnership agreement included cooperation among strategic industries including aerospace (BAE Systems) and defence81.

80 The other areas of cooperation were: political-diplomatic, regional and global issues, trade and investment, sustainable socio-economic development, education, training, science and technology, and people-to-people exchange.
On October 26, 2010, Vietnam and the United Kingdom held their 1st Strategic Dialogue in London. Vietnam was represented by Deputy Foreign Minister Bui Thanh Son, who was accompanied by officials from the Ministries of Public Security and National Defence. The UK was represented by Foreign and Commonwealth Office Minister of State Jeremy Brown, who was accompanied by officials from the Home Office and Ministry of Defence. The agenda for this meeting included bilateral issues, defence cooperation, organised crime, counter terrorism and regional security.

According to the joint communiqué issued after the Strategic Dialogue, “the Ministers looked forward to closer defence cooperation, including more frequent exchange of delegations and the signing of a Memorandum of Understanding on defence cooperation.”

A year later, on November 24, 2011, Vietnam and the UK signed a MOU on defence cooperation on the occasion of the three-day working visit to London by Deputy Minister for National Defence Lt. General Nguyen Chi Vinh. General Vinh met with Lord Astor of Hever, the Parliamentary Under Secretary of Defence. The MOU provided a framework for the conduct of bilateral defence relations and cooperation including the exchange of views and information on defence-related matters, exchange of high-level delegations, defence industry cooperation, and training and education for officers and technical staff.

The British Ambassador to Vietnam, Anthony Stokes, noted that the MOU covered three specific areas: political-defence cooperation, research, and military equipment supply. According to Ambassador Stokes, Vietnam and the UK will hold regular defence dialogues at senior level; he also underscored that there was scope for Britain’s defence and security industry to supply military equipment to Vietnam.

The MOU also included setting up a Joint Defence Working Group to promote defence industry cooperation, the provision of professional military education and training, and collaboration in research on defence strategy and military technique.

During his November visit, General Vinh also called in at the Royal College of Defence Studies. On March 28, 2012 Vietnam and the UK signed the 2012 Action Plan to further their strategic partnership. The Action Plan included a provision for stepping up defence cooperation in training, defence trade and peace support operations. In May of the same year, the Royal College of Defence Studies dispatched a delegation to Vietnam led by its deputy commander Major General Andrew Kennet. The delegation was received by General Vinh.

In November 2013, the UK posted its first Defence Attaché to Hanoi. Between 2012 and 2014 over one hundred VPA officers and defence staff completed training courses in Hanoi organised by the UK.

On January 8, 2015, the UK and Vietnam held their third annual Defence Working Group meeting in Hanoi to discuss cooperation for that year. According to the British Embassy in a statement released on January 9:

Defence industrial cooperation was identified as the most significant area for increased bilateral engagement, and [an] agreement was struck to inaugurate a specific task force to advance and pursue defence industry collaboration.

During 2015 this will focus on the maritime domain, using it as a 'proving ground' for developing a clearer mutual understanding of the sales and procurement processes of each nation, sharing information on future defense capability requirements, and developing a strategy for enhancing sales and procurement opportunities.

The Defence Working Group agreed to step up visits by senior defence delegations, to cooperate in training and cyber security, and to exchange information relating to hydrography and geospace. The UK Ministry of Defence announced it would step up funding for English-language training programs by three hundred percent in 2015 and offer training courses at the Royal College of Defence Studies to Vietnamese senior officers.

In March, the British Council commenced the first English-language training program for 2015 financed by the UK MOD. Fourteen VPA officers completed the seven-month course in October. This course is designed to enable VPA officers to attend special military training courses overseas and to participate in UN peacekeeping missions.

In June, a delegation of course members from the Royal College of Defence Studies made a study tour to Vietnam led by its Deputy Commander Lt. General Sandy Stone.

On September 21, eighteen VPA officers commenced a nine-month English language course under the auspices of the British Council. The course is aimed at preparing them for attending high-level defence courses abroad and UN peacekeeping missions. A total of seventy-two VPA officers are expected to complete English-language training course in 2015.

On November 4, Air Chief Marshal Stuart Peace, Vice Chief of the Defence Staff, paid a working visit to Vietnam where he met with Lt. General Vo Van Tuan, Deputy Chief of the VPA General Staff. Air Chief Peace was received by General Do Ba Ty, Chief of the VPA General Staff. General Ty suggested the two sides should “continue to effectively implement the MoU on the bilateral cooperation ties inked in November 2011, promote the bilateral working group on defence ties, as well as step up exchanges to put forward the signing of cooperation agreements on training, defence industry and peacekeeping.”

Developments Since the 12th National Party Congress. From May 9-13, 2016 the UK Ministry of Defence, in cooperation with Vietnam’s Ministry of National Defence, organized a training course on Exclusive Economic Zone law enforcement in Da Nang for naval officers from Vietnam, Brunei, Indonesia, Malaysia the Philippines and Thailand. Course members were introduced to “maritime international law… regional and global threats; maritime safety systems; search and rescue missions; maritime environmental issues; and disaster management.”

In May, eighteen VPA officers completed a nine-month English-language course conducted by the British Council in Ho Chi Minh City sponsored by the UK Ministry of Defence. The course commenced in September 2015. Over the last five years 153 VPA officers and defence personnel completed English-language training. Some of the graduates will be selected to take military courses in the UK or in other English-speaking countries, others are expected to take part in UN peacekeeping training in Vietnam.

On June 3, Senior Lt. General Nguyen Chi Vinh, Deputy Minister of National Defence, met with the UK Secretary of State for Defence Michael Fallon on the sidelines of the 15th Shangri-La Dialogue in Singapore. At their meeting Vinh told Fallon that Vietnam was willing to be a bridge between the UK and ASEAN and supported UK observer status at the annual ASEAN Defence Ministers’ Meeting-Plus. Fallon told Vinh that the UK would invite Vietnam to take part in a UN peacekeeping seminar in September and would coordinate with Vietnam to build a field hospital in South Sudan. Further, Fallon stated that the MOD would arrange for VPA officers to attend training courses in the UK.

In June it was revealed that BAE Systems was assessing potential opportunities in Vietnam’s defence industry and homeland security markets. According to Nick Glover, the Southeast Asia vice president of BAE Systems, “Vietnam could be an interesting market. We have been assessing industrial capability within the country and we are looking at potential opportunities. It could be a market where we look to enter through Applied Intelligence [BAE Systems “cyber security division”] or our HADR [Humanitarian Assistance, Disaster Relief] products. BAE Systems Inc. is a U.S. subsidiary and could take advantage of the U.S. Foreign Military Sales program to meet Vietnam’s procurement needs93.

In July, a Royal Navy (RN) dental clinical team took part in the U.S. Pacific Partnership program for the first time. On July 15, the VPA Navy hospital ship Khang Hoa (HQ 01), the JMSDF Shimokita (LST-4002) and the USNS Mercy (T-AH 19) docked at Tien Sa port, Danang. The RN dental team played a leading role in a two-day multinational dental summit and delivered dental treatment and preventive care to the local community94.

From September 5-7, a high-level Vietnamese defence delegation, led by Deputy Minister of National Defence Senior Lt. General Nguyen Chi Vinh, visited Britain to attend the Summit on UN Peacekeeping Missions hosted by the UK MOD. General Vinh met with Minister of State Earl Howe to review progress in bilateral defence cooperation under the 2011 MOU. The two officials noted that the current bilateral defense cooperation is not on a par with the potential of the two countries and the strategic partnership between Vietnam and the UK. The two sides agreed to study the possibilities to sign an agreement on defense cooperation vision [sic] with the aim of bolstering defense relations and cooperation toward efficiency and practical outcomes95.

General Vinh told his host that Vietnam was willing to be a bridge between the UK and ASEAN96. Vinh suggested that the UK assist Vietnam in “overcoming the consequences of war” and

The two sides step up cooperation on UN peacekeeping missions, hydrograph[y] and defense industry as well as in sharing views on strategic issues via exchange of defense experts and researchers and a future mechanism of the Defense Policy Dialogue at the Deputy Defense Minister level97.

General Vinh called on Alok Sharma, Under-Secretary of State at the Foreign and Commonwealth Office. Vinh and his delegation also visited the International Institute for Strategic Studies, Royal United Service Institute, and defence industry companies.

2.7. France

From 24-26 September 2013, Prime Minister Nguyen Tan Dung made an official visit to France. After his meeting with his counterpart, Jean-Marc Ayrault, they issued a Joint Statement on Viet Nam-France Strategic Partnership. According to a press summary this document outlined five broad areas of cooperation, including national defence and security. The Joint Statement provided for regular strategic dialogues between their respective ministries of foreign affairs and defence at deputy minister level. With respect to defence cooperation: the two sides agree to increase the exchange of delegations of all levels, while strengthening the operation of the Joint Committee on defence cooperation and perfecting the cooperation in personnel training, military medicine and equipment as well as visits of military ships.

France will assist Viet Nam in taking part in the United Nations’ peace-keeping operations.

Both countries share the desire to enhance cooperation in the defence industry. They reiterated their commitment to fighting the proliferation of mass destructive weapons.

Developments Since the 12th National Party Congress. From May 2-6, 2016, the French naval ship Tonnerre called in at Cam Ranh International Port, Khanh Hoa province. Press reports noted that this goodwill visit was in advance of the scheduled visits by France’s Defence Minster and President.

From June 5-7, France’s Defence Minister, Jean-Yves Le Drian, made an official visit to Hanoi to discuss a strategic partnership agreement with his counterpart, General Ngo Xuan Lich. The two ministers agree to step up cooperation in “traditional areas”, to exchange experiences on joining UN peacekeeping and safety of navigation and aviation, and facilitate defence industry cooperation. Significantly, the two ministers agreed to establish a strategic partnership in defence. Lich also stated Vietnam’s willingness to act as a bridge between France and ASEAN. Le Drian paid a courtesy call on President Tran Dai Quang.

On August 21, Nicolas Dmitrieff, Chairman of France’s Constructions Industrielles de la Méditerranée (CNIM) group, visited Hanoi for discussions on defence industry cooperation. Dmitrieff met with Lt. General Phan Van Giang, Chief of the VPA General Staff. General Giang “suggested both sides actively learn about each other’s cooperation demands in the field of defence industry, focusing on products that serve defensive purposes and socio-economic development as well.”

From September 5-7, President Francois Hollande made an official visit to Vietnam for discussions with his counterpart, President Tran Dai Quang, VCP Secretary General Nguyen Phu Trong, Prime Minister Nguyen Xuan Phuc and Chair of the National Assembly, Nguyen Thi Kim Ngan. On the eve of President Hollande’s visit, President Quang gave an interview to Agence France-Presse in which he emphasized that “[d]efence cooperation has become one of the pillars in the strategic partnership between Vietnam and France and will be broadened in the coming time.” Quang also suggested that the two countries should adopt a common vision of defence cooperation to make it more effective. He suggested that Vietnam and France could cooperate in “United Nations peacekeeping missions; ensuring security and safety and freedom of navigation and overflight, and solving issues relating to cyber security and non-conventional security issues.”

100 Thuy Dung, “French warship to visit Cam Ranh port”, People’s Army Newspaper Online, April 29, 2016.
On September Quang and Hollande held a joint press conference where they announced their agreement “to develop a long-term vision for cooperation that could ensure their common interests. To do that, political connections [sic] need first to be tightened” and “to enhance defence co-operation through dialogue on defence strategy, the procurement of military equipment and visits by naval ships”\(^{106}\).

President Quang also noted that, “France would assist Vietnam with United Nations peacekeeping operations and co-operate to deal with maritime and aviation security issues”\(^{107}\). President Hollande was quoted as saying he hoped his visit would “give a breath of fresh air to the countries’ strategic partnership” and that “the two leaders wanted to solidify this partnership in politics and hold more dialogue between the two defence ministries so as to jointly solve regional and global problems”\(^{108}\).

On September 15–16, two French medical doctors with experience in UN peacekeeping joined members of the Vietnam Peacekeeping Centre at Military Hospital 175 to discuss Vietnam’s forthcoming deployment of a level-two field hospital to the United Nations Mission in the South Sudan\(^{109}\).

From October 26–27, a VPA delegation led by Senior Lt. General Vo Van Tuan, Deputy Chief of the General Staff and Deputy Head of the Ministry of National Defence’s Steering Committee for Peacekeeping, attended the Ministerial Conference on Peacekeeping in the Francophone area in Paris. This conference was attended by representatives from fifty-six countries and organisations\(^{110}\).

From November 7–11, Deputy Defence Minister Sr. Lt. General Nguyen Chi Vinh led a high-ranking military delegation to France to attend the first Vietnam-France Defence Policy Dialogue at the invitation of Philippe Errera, Director-General of the General Department for Strategy and International Relations in the Ministry of Defence. The dialogue reflected “increasing political trust” and marked an “adjustment of bilateral defence cooperation” to achieve practical outcomes\(^{111}\). The two sides noted positive outcomes in bilateral defence cooperation including “personnel training, UN peacekeeping operations and maritime security” under a MOU signed in November 2009\(^{112}\).

Errera and Vinh agreed to increase exchange of delegations at all levels, enhance defence strategic dialogues; collaborate and support each other at multilateral defence and security mechanisms and forums; and strengthen cooperation on military medicine, training[,] defence industry, naval ship visits, UN peacekeeping operations as well as expand new cooperation areas such as maritime and aviation security and safety, and non-traditional security issues…\(^{113}\).

They also agreed to sign two documents, the Vietnam-France Joint Vision on Defence Cooperation and Agreement on Information Exchange and Secret [sic] Protection. At the conclusion of the dialogue Errera and Vinh witnessed the signing of two technical agreements on military medical cooperation and cooperation on UN peacekeeping operations. General Vinh and his delegation later visited Villacoublay Air Base and the War Academy.

On November 23, a forum to promote defence industry cooperation between Vietnam and France was held in Hanoi co-sponsored by Ministry of National Defence’s General Department of Defense Industry (GDDI) and the French Ministry of Defence’s General Directorate for Armament (GDA). Vietnam was represented by Major General Doan Hung Minh, Deputy Director of GDDI and France was represented by Lt. General J. Cousquer, Director for Asia, America and Africa, DGA.114

General Minh said that, “Vietnam will give priority to boosting bilateral cooperation with France, especially in technology transfer, weapons and equipment production and repairs for national defence, human resources training, and management experience exchange on defence industry”115. General Cousquer noted that “France is willing to support and share experiences with Vietnam in the defence-security, including issues related to global security, defence industry and marine security.”116

3. Conclusion

Vietnam has sought to avoid being caught in the middle of strategic rivalry between a rising China and the United States by pursuing a multi-polar balance among seven major powers - Russia, India, Japan, China, the United States, United Kingdom and France. The purpose of strategic partnerships is to give each country equity in Vietnam to prevent Vietnam from being pulled into a rival’s orbit and to enable Vietnam to maintain its strategic autonomy. The paper briefly examined Vietnam’s strategic partnerships with the major powers after the 12th National Party Congress in January 2016.

This paper discussed the exchange of high-level visits, strategic dialogue, defence cooperation agreements (equipment procurement, military technology, education and training, military medicine and maritime security), naval port visits and engagement activities, and national defence industry cooperation. This paper concludes that Vietnam seeks to use international defence cooperation to give each strategic partner equity in Vietnam’s stability and development in order to ensure Vietnam’s non-alignment and strategic autonomy.

When taken as a whole, Vietnam’s web of strategic and comprehensive partnerships serves to insulate Vietnam from Sino-US competition and provide Vietnam with the means to maneuver among the major powers in order to protect its independence and self-reliance.
